Description :

PDF-9e91b | "I constantly questioned myself as a child. All of the positive images of people I'd seen were white. To be beautiful, you not only had to be stick-skinny, with no behind, you had to have long silky long hair and blue eyes, a thin nose, and thin lips. I just didn't measure up."-- Charisse Nesbit, Maryland These true stories from every part of America tell what it was like growing up in a world where ... Dreaming In Color Living In Black And White: Our Own Stories of Growing Up Black in America
